

GUN DOG

"OUTDOOR ADVENTURER"

American Cocker Spaniel – American Water Spaniel – Barbet – Boykin Spaniel – Brittany Spaniel – Chesapeake Bay Retriever – Clumber Spaniel – English Cocker Spaniel – English Pointer – English Setter – English Springer Spaniel – Field Spaniel – Flat-Coated Retriever – German Shorthair Pointer – German Wirehaired Pointer – Golden Retriever – Gordon Setter – Irish Red and White Spaniel – Irish Setter – Irish Water Spaniel – Labrador Retriever – Lagotto Romagnolo – Munsterlander – Portuguese Water Dog – Spinone Italiano – Standard Poodle – Sussex Spaniel – Vizsla – Weimaraner – Welsh Springer Spaniel – Wirehaired Pointing Griffon – mixes of any of the above breeds

You'll fall in love with your gun dog because he's:

Enthusiastic – He is generally eager and willing to get on board with whatever the day brings.

Cooperative – A team player at heart, he was made to be an attentive, trainable and responsive partner in life.

Outgoing – He has an extroverted spirit both with other people and animals

You might find a gun dog hard to live with because he's:

Active – While his ambition for athleticism is admirable, his physical needs can be a little intense at the end of a long day.

Immature – The very same silly puppy nature that makes him so playful can manifest in annoying traits such as a short attention span, neediness, impulsivity, foolishness or insecurity.

Doting – Though many of us adore the endless affections of our dogs, you may find him a little heavy on the PDA if you really value your personal space.

You might find yourself seeking professional help for:

- Distractibility or impulsivity
- Overwhelming greeting behavior with people, such as jumping and licking
- Destructiveness to home or personal belongings
- Hyperactivity or restlessness
- Sensitivity to loud noises and storms
- Problematic oral fixations, including incessant ball-pushing for yet another round of fetch; sock hunting and consumption; and self-injurious lick granulomas
- "I'll never grow up" Peter Pan Complex

